Tekst 1

- 1p 1 Waarom zijn voetbalkaartjes in Engeland goedkoper geworden?
Ze zijn goedkoper geworden omdat
- A clubs rekening zijn gaan houden met de financiële situatie van fans.
 - B de minister heeft bepaald dat voetbalwedstrijden voor iedereen betaalbaar moesten zijn.
 - C fans lagere prijzen hebben geëist naar aanleiding van een prijsvergelijking in een sportprogramma.

Price of Football Tickets

The average price of football tickets across England's top four divisions has gone down. According to an annual BBC Sport study, tickets now cost up to 2.4 per cent less than they did last season. Manchester City has the cheapest season tickets in the Premier League at £299. Arsenal's are the most expensive at £985.

Reasonable Ticket Prices?

Sports Minister Hugh Robertson said: "Clubs are beginning to understand what fans are going through and change their prices accordingly. People simply have less money these days because of the crisis."

Tekst 2

- 1p 2 Er wordt vaak over voetbal en geld verdienen gesproken.
→ Wie van de onderstaande personen zegt dat voetballers te veel betaald krijgen?
Schrijf de naam op in je uitwerkbijlage.

Your comments:

Our local football Guernsey FC tickets are cheap. £1! Our prices are fine!
Rachel, Guernsey, Channel Islands

My granddad used to go to the Middlesbrough matches all the time but he had to stop buying his season tickets because the prices were just way too high. Football players are highly overpaid. All they do is kick a ball around.
Sarah, Redcar, England

It is expensive but it is worth it, seeing all your favourite players scoring goals, having fun, watching the game, singing the anthem of your favourite team and it is not the same as watching it at home so really it is worth it.
Cody, Cardiff, Wales

It should be cheaper because my dad has no money left and my birthday is close.
Brandon, Essex, England

I think football tickets are too expensive, because if you go and see a match and they lose you don't feel like you've got value for money. I'll just stay at home and watch the games from the couch with my best friends and lots of crisps!
Jessica, Nottingham, England

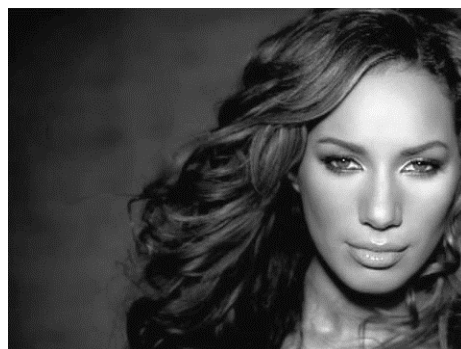

I don't think they're too expensive, just get a membership card. That's what I do to watch Arsenal.
Josh, Jersey, Channel Island

Good Girl Gone Bad

Interview with singer Leona Lewis who won the X Factor. One of her singles is called 'Trouble'.

- 1 When did you last get into trouble?
"On a plane recently I got up to use the toilet when the seatbelt sign was on. The stewardesses weren't rude, but they were like, 'You need to go and sit down now!' You know how uptight they can get? I had to go back to my seat and didn't go to the loo - I was bursting!"
- 2 Did you get into trouble when you were a kid?
"I was pretty nerdy and good, but I got into a bit of trouble with my parents when I turned 14. I used to sneak out and stay out later than I was allowed. I'd get grounded, stuff like that. I wasn't allowed to see my friends for a while. I remember one year it felt like it was a never-ending grounding! But my mum's quite soft, so she'd always let me off."
- 3 Did you ever get into trouble with your brothers?
"All the time. With my little brother, definitely! But I'd get my younger cousins into trouble too. I'd blame it on them if I had spilt something or something else naughty happened. Sometimes I got caught out, but most of the time they got the blame! My brother would get me back though and say stuff like: 'Leona pushed me down the stairs!'"
- 4 What about school? Did you ever misbehave?
"O, yeah I certainly did! My French teacher used to get annoyed with me all the time! She wrote on my report, 'If Leona could speak French as well as she could sing, then she'd get an A.' I was always singing in class, that was what I did all the time, not paying any attention to the teacher. The teacher will probably think now that I used her class for practice."
- 5 What is the silliest thing you have ever done?
"One night my friends and I were in a bar in Greece and there were those big white Greek statues and we had lipstick so we started drawing on them. Very bad actually! It came off easily but you could still see where we had done it, so we got into trouble for that. I know the manager so the next day he said: 'Erm, did you...?' and I was like, 'Oh, it was my friends!'"

Chicken Alert

- 1 A couple from Wisconsin says a cluck, not a fire truck, helped them escape a fire at their home. Dennis Murawska, 59, said their pet chicken named Cluck Cluck woke his wife Susan Cotey, 52, with loud clucking from its cage in the basement, two floors below. "The chicken can make a lot of noise when she gets excited," he said. It was 6:15am. and the couple's two cats were also running around in the house. Dennis said he had been half awake but didn't know about the fire because the smoke alarms hadn't gone off.
- 2 Cluck Cluck came from a nearby farm. When the chicken began walking over to Dennis' house, his neighbor said he could kill the chicken because it wasn't producing any eggs. But Dennis felt sorry for Cluck Cluck because she had a bad foot and he decided to keep her. He fed the bird and built a coop in the garden, but his wife let Cluck Cluck into the basement on cold nights.
- 3 The couple escaped, and firefighters found the chicken in its cage and the cats alive in the basement. The couple and their surviving cats checked into a hotel, while Cluck Cluck is staying with the neighbor who used to own her. Fire Chief Jeff Gaede said: "We are used to hearing about a dog or cat alerting a family, but we have never heard of a chicken waking up a resident for a fire. That's pretty amazing."

I want to be in a band!

Q: I really want to be in a girl band when I'm older so that I can become famous. I'm scared that if this doesn't happen, then I'll end up jobless because there's nothing else I want to do! What will I do if my dream doesn't come true?

Olivia, Birmingham

Laura says: Whatever career path you're hoping to go down, always have a Plan B, in case your first choice doesn't go as planned! When you're choosing your options, have a chat with your music teachers and career advisors and ask their advice.

And remember that being famous does have plus sides but there are negatives too: like no privacy, hardly any time to yourself, and never really being sure if people like you for yourself or because they want a bit of what you've got

Scary Suitcase

- 1 A family were shocked when they returned home from a holiday to Egypt and found a scorpion hiding in one of their suitcases. Hollie Jayes, 18, found the scorpion inside her mother's suitcase at their home in Skegness. Her mother had taken her clothes out of her suitcase and put the case in her closet without seeing the ten-centimeter long creepy animal inside. Some time later, when Hollie opened the suitcase to pack for a stay with a friend, she thought she saw a spider in it. When she looked again, she saw it was a scorpion.
- 2 Hollie immediately shut the suitcase, threw it into the bathroom and called her parents, but they didn't believe her at first. As Hollie was very scared, they came home as soon as possible. Hollie's dad then put the closed suitcase in the garden and Hollie's mum called the London Zoo, but they couldn't help out. So they called the animal rescue organisation and they came to collect the suitcase, to check if the scorpion had not laid any eggs.
- 3 Later, the Jayes family heard that the scorpion was a Deathstalker, one of the most dangerous scorpions in the world. This yellow scorpion is found in Arabic countries. The sting of the scorpion will not kill a healthy grown-up but is very dangerous for young and old people who are sick - and it is very painful. There is no cure available in Western Europe.
- 4 Hollie's mum was very scared when she realised what could have happened. "At first I didn't believe it. It's quite scary to think I put my hand in that suitcase maybe 20 or 30 times while unpacking, I must have been so close to it!"

- A Ze hebben bezwaar tegen een nieuwe regel over tatoeages.
 - B Ze moeten vooraf toestemming vragen voor nieuwe tatoeages.
 - C Ze mogen geen zichtbare tatoeages meer hebben.

Tattoo ban

Tattoos on the faces of police officers are to be banned by the Metropolitan Police. Under new rules for recruits, tattoos visible above the collar line are not accepted and other body art must be covered. Staff with existing 'visible' tattoos that cannot be covered by regular uniforms could be fired. Commissioner Bernard Hogan-Howe believes facial ink can 'damage the professional reputation' of the force. But the Tattoo Club of Great Britain believes these rules are outdated because tattoos are widespread nowadays.

"It was the summer holidays and I was in Morocco with my family. One day at the beach, my sister was swimming in the sea when I spotted something bluish-grey circling her. I was sure it was a shark, so I screamed, 'Get out of the water! Shark!' The lifeguard got everyone out of the water, just as the 'shark' was swept to the shore - it was a plastic bag! Everybody had a go at me and I went bright red! It was so embarrassing!"

From a Park Bench to Filming

Saskia and Emmanuel

- 1 At seventeen Emmanuel was homeless and sleeping on a park bench. Now he is a well-known fashion designer and musician who just released his second single, called Fabulous with his band Cushh. Emmanuel (27), who likes to go by only his first name, owns an expensive home in Richmond, London and divides his time between London and Los Angeles, where he has made videos with top producers.
- 2 Emmanuel was born in the UK, but his parents took him with them to their native Nigeria when he was a boy. At 17 he returned alone, excited to be back in London again. "I got on a bus and thought 'when I see an area I would like to live in, I'll get off.' That turned out to be Ealing, but the council said they couldn't give me anywhere to stay. I just wandered out and saw a park nearby. As I didn't have anywhere else to go, I stayed there for three months.
- 3 It was very, very hard and lonely but I never doubted that things would change. I used to write things on my hand, things like poems and songs and the amount of money I would make. When you are out on the streets by yourself you have to keep very strong."
- 4 Eventually, the council put him in a B&B accommodation, sharing a room with two much older men. He had two full-time jobs to fund his education, studying IT and Business Information at Greenwich University. He started Cushh with long-term friend Saskia Lockey and used social networking such as MySpace and YouTube to promote his music. The music video for Fabulous was shot in LA by Daniel Zirilli who worked with a lot of celebrities ranging from the Rolling Stones to Tupac.
- 5 When speaking about his past Emmanuel says: "It's like I was on a runaway train with no one in the driver's seat, but now I am driving it. My success is a dream come true but I have worked really hard for this. It shows what you can do with determination."

Too old for Facebook?

A 104-year-old pensioner can be forgiven for lying about her age after being forced to do so - on Facebook. Grandmother Marguerite Joseph attempted to enter her real age when signing up to the social network when an error message appeared. She tried to fill in her birthyear as 1908 with the help of her granddaughter, but Facebook automatically changed it to 1928. It means the grandmother will remain years younger forever!

Dogs Taught How To Drive A Car

- 1 Three dogs from a New Zealand animal shelter have been taught how to drive. Monty, Porter and Ginny have learned the skills to prove how intelligent dogs can be. Employees of the shelter have spent weeks training the dogs. In this way they hope more people will come to adopt abandoned pets and give them new homes. The dogs can start a car, change gear, steer and brake. They sit in a driving position on their backs responding to instructions called out from the dog experts.
- 2 Animal trainer Mark Vette and his team began training the animals using a fake vehicle before introducing them to a real car - a Mini especially adapted for paws. He said: "We train the dogs to do different actions. The first thing we teach them is to touch the different objects with the right paw and left paw. In this case we've put 10 actions together. It's a lot to do, and for the dog to start to get an idea of what actually is happening, takes quite a few weeks. So we'll start the car, get into position, brake on, gear in place, back onto the steering wheel, accelerate, take off and drive fast along a straight line and then stop," said Mr Vette. "During the intense training they are given special dog food to prevent them from getting too fat."
- 3 However, the animal trainer says things did not always go smoothly when the dogs got into the real car. "A couple of days ago the car was going too fast, the trainer nearly got run over," he said. For the final test the dogs will also have to brake as they are driving along a narrow lane. Trainers are hoping they won't become too distracted driving past any lamp posts. Now the animals are going to show off their skills on live TV in New Zealand next week.

Comments:

My dog has a chauffeur..... ME!

Hooter, Atlanta

I think this is brilliant, it's really bringing these poor dogs to the attention of people and has made me smile. Looking forward to seeing some hot dog laps.

Hayden Baker

Er, It's nothing more than learning tricks. That's not really driving. The dog's just been taught to push levers and stuff in a vehicle environment. Yawn. Yawn.

Quack

Amazing story. A cat would never be able to learn how to drive, like these dogs do. Cats would expect to be driven along in comfort in the back seat with all the comforts of the lounge.

Ruz

So love this, I so hope the campaign goes well. I just hope the trainers are reading these comments. Thank you for this. All the very best and thank you for the amazing work you do.

The 4,000 baby duckies (the traditional size rubber duck) colour the sea yellow as they race to dry land! The first 60 baby ducks that reach the shore win their owners a prize.

- 3 Mind you: the duckies aren't left to float away, the organisers make sure all the duckies return to their rightful owners. "We have never lost one. We've got every duck, even if we've had to search for two hours to get it," said Duck-A-Thon co-chair Warren Conde. Ducks that aren't sold during the three days are donated to the Huntington Beach Community Clinic.
