

Even artichokes have hearts

Thoughts

There is always a lense through which you see the world. This lense may be totally different for other people and you might not even be able to imagine it for them.

“I like to look for things no one else catches.”

- Amélie

The team

You are Amélie. In class, you watch the movie Amélie and in groups of four you assemble a box with artefacts telling your story.

Procedure

In groups of four, you think about a story you want to tell. You brainstorm characters, key events, maybe even places. Gather objects representing parts of your story. These objects should trigger the right line of thoughts for another group so that they tell your story. Seal the box and send it. You will receive another group's box to tell their story.

Outcome/aim

Tell the story according to the box you receive and check it with the group you got the box from. You may tell this story in different ways: video, storyboard, written, etc.
